

The image shows a Visual Studio Code editor window with a Python script named `dataanalysis.py` and its terminal output. The script uses `pandas` to load a CSV file, display the first 5 rows, and provide dataset information.

```
1 import pandas as pd
2
3 # Define the path to the sample CSV dataset
4 csv_file_path = 'test.csv'
5
6 print(f"loading data from: {csv_file_path}")
7
8 # Load and inspect the CSV dataset
9 try:
10     df = pd.read_csv(csv_file_path)
11     print("\nDataset loaded successfully!")
12
13     # Display the first few rows of the DataFrame
14     print("\nFirst 5 rows of the dataset:")
15     print(df.head())
16
17     # Display basic information about the DataFrame (columns, non-null counts, data types)
18     print("\nDataset Information:")
19     df.info()
20
21     # Display descriptive statistics of the numerical columns
22     print("\nDescriptive Statistics:")
```

The terminal output shows the execution of the script:

```
